MARINA BROSCHOFSKY Red Door Design House

While many designers in the Valley can help give your home the “mountain” feel, Marina at Red Door gives you “mountain contemporary,” delivering the feel of the mountains without literally having animal heads on the wall and red plaid flannel sheets. Her modern approach is apparent when you walk into her showroom, a space with clean lines, beautiful furniture, and pops of color; arranged in such a way that you can instantly imagine it in your own house (or even Marina's).

“Red Door is an extension of my style and the pieces that I love to surround myself with.”
—Marina Broschofsky

How would you describe your space and your vision for it?

Marina: Red Door Design House is a combination of a home furnishing retail store, showroom, home staging area, and interior design studio. When I opened my firm 12 years ago, my vision was to offer a fresh, new look for the Valley with a variety of styles and price points. In the past several years, my style has been defined as “mountain contemporary,” meaning that many of the pieces have clean design lines, yet feature beautiful natural, rustic woods and materials to maintain a warm and comfortable mountain feel. I wanted to make shopping easy for my clients—whether they come into the store or access pieces on my website. Besides furniture, Red Door offers home accessories, lamps, pillows, artwork, and gifts.
